

Human rights in Indian small-scale fisheries:

Insights from a social economy mapping of gendered work in a dried fish value chain in Valsad

Mohammad Anas Shoebullah Khan
Project Manager -Dried Fish Matters
University of Manitoba, Canada

SSF Guidelines, Gender, and Human Rights

- Human rights-based approach
- Prioritizing marginalized and vulnerable groups/individuals
- Gender equality and equity
- Power imbalances in the value chain
- Legal pluralism – State and non-state duty bearers

Value chain connecting the coast to the forest

- Dried fish value chain connecting coastal areas to the hinterland
- Value chain driven by Adivasi consumers
- Women are major players in processing and retail trade
- Situated and gendered barriers to human rights

From social economy to gender-sensitive public policy

Social economy mapping - identify situated vulnerability and marginalization

Identifying state and non-state duty bearers

State: Infrastructure – roads, transport and WASH

Civil society: Addressing informal barriers, collective action, advocacy

Localising and translating human rights advocacy and implementation

Social Sciences and Humanities Research
Council of Canada

Canada

Thank you!

University of Manitoba

THE UNIVERSITY OF
WINNIPEG